Decent Work in Global Supply Chains

Taught by Mark Anner, Esther Busser, Dr. Michael Fichter, Tandiwe Gross, Dr Frank Hoffer, Jenny Holdcroft, and Praveen Jha.

This course discussed the particularities and strategies of transnational corporations as actors orchestrating global supply chains, as well as their impact on labour relations worldwide. It looked at regulatory frameworks for trade, investment and taxation, and explores whether global supply chains contribute to development.

After presenting the major decent work gaps in today's global supply chains, the course looked at the existing governance framework and its gaps. What are the governance gaps and what are strategies and tools for an alternative governance structure that promotes sustainable development and decent work in global supply chains?
